WHEREAS, the citizens of the Commonwealth are entitled to the assurance that the judgment of public officers and employees will not be compromised or affected by inappropriate conflicts; and

WHEREAS, during the 2016 and 2017 Sessions, the General Assembly modified the ethics laws to strengthen, improve, and clarify provisions relating to the coverage of gifts, disclosure statements of state and local officials, and registrations by lobbyists; and

WHEREAS, although a variety of issues have been addressed by the ethics laws, further review of the laws' effectiveness and efficiency in regard to disclosure and compliance activities is warranted; now, therefore, be it

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 81

Commemorating the 50th anniversary of Green v. County School Board of New Kent County.

Agreed to by the Senate, February 13, 2018
Agreed to by the House of Delegates, March 6, 2018

WHEREAS, the historic Supreme Court decision in Green v. County School Board of New Kent County was issued 50 years ago on May 27, 1968, forcing schools in Virginia and across the country to desegregate after more than a decade of active resistance; and

WHEREAS, the unanimous Supreme Court decision in the 1954 Brown v. Board of Education case had declared segregated schools to be "inherently unequal," overturning the doctrine of "separate but equal" espoused in the 1896 Plessy v. Ferguson ruling; and

WHEREAS, the 1955 ruling in Brown II ordered that public schools must desegregate "with all deliberate speed"; and

WHEREAS, in defiance of the rulings, Virginia legislators led by United States Senator Harry F. Byrd began a coordinated effort known as Massive Resistance to block desegregation in Virginia's public schools, resulting in continued segregation and in some cases the closure of public schools, denying equal education to Virginia's students and, for many, denying any education at all; and

WHEREAS, New Kent County schools deliberately maintained a policy of segregation for a full decade after such policies were declared unconstitutional, allowing the county's New Kent School to continue to serve only white students, while the George W. Watkins school served only black students; and

WHEREAS, Dr. Calvin Green, chemistry teacher, father to three New Kent County students, and president of the New Kent County National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), filed suit against the school board in 1965, seeking to force integration; and

WHEREAS, the New Kent County School Board responded to the case with token compliance, implementing a "freedom of choice" plan that allowed students to petition for permission to switch schools but which effectively maintained racial segregation in the county's schools and placed the burden of desegregating on African American families; and

WHEREAS, Green v. County School Board of New Kent County was ultimately heard by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1968, with NAACP attorneys Samuel Tucker, Jack Greenberg, Henry Marsh III, James Nabrit III, and Oliver Hill preparing and successfully arguing the case; and

WHEREAS, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously that the county's "freedom of choice" plan failed to provide equal protection under the law, as it produced no meaningful change and was not a sufficient step toward desegregation as mandated in Brown v. Board of Education and Brown II; and

WHEREAS, Justice William Brennan wrote in the Supreme Court's decision that school boards must "come forward with a plan that promises realistically to work, and promises realistically to work now"; and

WHEREAS, in compliance with the Supreme Court's mandate, New Kent County desegregated its two public schools, converting them to integrated elementary and high schools, separated by grade level; and

WHEREAS, Virginia's efforts to desegregate its public schools began in earnest after the Green v. County School Board of New Kent County decision; and

WHEREAS, the historic Green v. County School Board of New Kent County case marks a victory in the nation's ongoing struggle for equality and a milestone that remains within living memory by which Virginia may mark its progress; now, therefore, be it

WHEREAS, in 2018, the Virginia Commission for the Arts is celebrating 50 years of supporting arts and culture for all Virginians; and

WHEREAS, the Commonwealth's educational priorities demand a well-rounded education for every Virginia child, including access to arts learning and arts and cultural experiences; and

WHEREAS, nonprofit arts organizations represent an important asset in the Commonwealth's economic development; in 2017, Virginia was home to more than 17,000 arts-related businesses that employed more than 68,500 people and bolstered the Commonwealth's tourism and travel industries; and

WHEREAS, public investment in the arts at the state level sends a strong message to the private sector and creates leverage for arts organizations to obtain federal and local government funding and significant private support; and

WHEREAS, through its grant process, the Virginia Commission for the Arts provides essential operating support for nonprofit arts organizations and educational activities that reached 1.6 million Virginia children last year, and enabled more than 5.8 million people to attend over 38,000 arts events made possible through funding provided by the Commission; and
